Page: Best Houston Movers

1. Get recommendations. Ask friends, coworkers, and local real estate agents. Look in the phone book for moving companies that have offices near your home. You're going to want to get an in-person estimate of how much your move will cost. Don't rely on any estimate that comes from someone who hasn't looked in every one of your closets. Don't assume that big-name companies are best. Do not get estimates through websites that offer to "find you a mover." Find the mover yourself and avoid the numerous scams associated with some of these sites. And don't use household-goods brokerage services that find a moving company for you—they are not regulated by the laws that movers must follow.

2. Do an initial screening. When you have a list of recommended movers, go online to do a quick background check (you can do a more thorough check later). Call or go to the website of the Better Business Bureau <https://www.bbb.org/>. You also can call or e-mail the American Moving and Storage Association (moving.org, 703-683-7410, info@moving.org) to see if a moving company is a member, which means it has agreed to abide by the organization's published tariffs and to participate in its arbitration program. AMSA membership is voluntary. As long as a moving company checks out in all other ways, the fact that it is not a member shouldn't rule it out. Be sure to check the consumer-advocacy sites movingscam.com <https://www.movingscam.com/>. Each of these has a blacklist of companies with a history of consumer complaints, as well as tips and general information about the moving industry. You can also do a search using the company name at Rip-off Report (ripoffreport.com).

3. Get multiple estimates: You should end up with at least three or four companies to call for an in-home estimate. If you're moving to another state, ask if the company will give you a written binding estimate or, even better, a binding not-to-exceed estimate. Both types of estimates put a guaranteed cap on what you will pay for your move. While nonbinding estimates are legal (as long as they're given free), as the U.S. Department of Transportation moving guide warns, "You should expect the final cost to be more than the estimate." And while interstate movers are allowed to charge you for binding estimates, most will offer them free. Estimates for interstate moves will be based on the weight of the items you're moving and the distance of the move. For moves within the same state, rules about estimates vary: Some states (such as California) require that movers give a written and signed binding estimate; others (like Illinois) forbid them to. Either way, estimates for these movers are based on the amount of time the move will take.

4. Do your initial due diligence: When an estimator comes to your home, show him everything you want to have moved—in the closets, the backyard, the basement, the attic. If on your moving day the foreman believes you have significantly more stuff than was calculated in your estimate, he can “challenge” the original estimate (before everything is on the truck, not after). He can’t force you to pay a higher amount, but he doesn’t have to move your stuff for the original amount, either. And at that point you probably don’t have a lot of other options. Also, make sure the estimator knows about any conditions at your new home that might complicate the move, such as stairs, elevators, or a significant distance from the curb to the closest door. While the estimator is at your home, get as much information as you can about the company. Make sure it will be moving you itself, not contracting the job out to another mover. Find out how long the company has been in business. (You want one that’s been around a few years at least, and ideally 10 or more.) By the time the estimator leaves, you should have collected all of the following:

- The company’s full name and any other names under which it does business.
- The company’s address, phone numbers, and e-mail and website addresses.
- Names and contact information for the company’s references.

USDOT (U.S. Department of Transportation) and MC (motor carrier) license numbers. The U.S. Department of Transportation booklet called “Your Rights and Responsibilities When You Move.”

<https://www.fmcsa.dot.gov/protect-your-move/consumer-rights>

Federal law requires any interstate mover to provide you with this guide, which is the official rule book of the interstate moving industry. (You can download a copy at fmcsa.dot.gov.) For in-state moves, movers are regulated by the state’s department of transportation or its public utilities or commerce commission. Some states publish their own moving-guide pamphlets.

5. Review the estimate. The estimate may be a combined document that, when signed by you and the moving-company representative, serves as your order for service and bill of lading, too. These, along with the inventory list created when your goods are loaded, are the basic documents any mover should provide you with. Make sure you see the words “written binding estimate” up top, as well as the mover’s signature with a date at the bottom. For an interstate move, the estimate should clearly describe the type and quantity of goods you’re shipping, the distance to your new home, when your things will be picked up and delivered, and any additional services (such as packing) and supplies the moving company is providing. If you want to purchase additional insurance from your mover (above the standard 60 cents a pound that the mover’s insurance covers), make sure you understand the costs and details of that coverage. For an in-state move, for which you can’t get a binding estimate, you should still get a written estimate that sets out the hourly rates and any additional costs you may incur (for supplies, tolls, driving time to and from the mover’s facilities). If you’re not sure about anything in the estimate, call and ask. And have the company send you a revised written estimate if necessary—don’t just take someone’s word for anything.<sup>6</sup>

Organize and stay informed: As you get estimates, collect them in a brightly colored (that is, hard-to-lose) moving folder. Keep this folder open in plain sight as later estimators come in. This shows them you’re doing your homework, which encourages them to be honest and perhaps give you a more competitive quote.

7. Cheapest estimate may be suspicious: Too cheap will save you money, but may not save you the stress, frustrations and spending more money. Don't be a victim of rogue movers. When you've gotten all your estimates in, compare the bids. Be wary of any company that comes in much lower than the others. Look at high bids to see where the extra costs are coming from. Call and ask questions if you don't understand anything. If you have several reasonable-sounding bids from reputable companies, don't be afraid to negotiate to get the best possible rate. Especially in a market where there's lots of competition, most movers will work with you on pricing.<sup>8</sup>

Now check out the contenders in more detail. Take the information you've gathered and get back online. First, make sure they're incorporated in your state—and confirm how long they've been in business—by checking your secretary of state's office. Some have searchable databases of businesses online; if not, call the number in the government pages of the phone book.<sup>9</sup> your moving company has the license and insurance it needs to move you legally. (Yes, there are movers who solicit business without the legal authority to do so.) Go to safersys.org, the website of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) <https://www.fmcsa.dot.gov/>, and enter the company's USDOT number and click on "Search" (you can also search by name or MC number). If you have an accurate DOT number, you'll be shown a screen with lots of information on the company. Here's what to look for: The company's name, address, and phone numbers. Are they the same ones the company gave you? The "Out of Service" field, at the upper left of the form, should say "No." The fields labeled "Power Units" and "Drivers" tell you how many trucks and drivers the company has. A company that claims to do 100 moves a month but has only two trucks deserves skeptical treatment. Under "Operation Classification," there should be an X next to "Auth. for Hire." Under "Carrier Operation," if you are moving out of state, there should be an X next to "Interstate." Under "Cargo Carried," there should be an X next to "Household Goods." Farther down, in the "Inspections/Crashes" section, you should be concerned if the company's average is much higher than the national average shown. In the "Safety Rating" section, if there has been a review, the results should be "Satisfactory." At the bottom of the page, click on the "FMCSA Licensing & Insurance site" link. On the next page, click on either the "HTML" or the "Report" button under "View Details" to get to the "Motor Carrier Details" page. Under the column "Authority Type," there are three listings: "Common," "Contract," and "Broker." The "Authority Status" column to the right tells you if the company's authority is active. At least "Common" should be listed as active, with "No" under "Application Pending." In the next table down, there should be a "Yes" under "Household Goods." The bottom table contains insurance information. A moving company is required to have both bodily-injury and property-damage (BIPD) insurance ($750,000 minimum) and cargo insurance filed. Under the heading "Insurance on File," BIPD should be at least $750,000, and "Cargo" should say "Yes." You can also call the FMCSA to get information on the status of a company's licensing (202-366-9805) and insurance (202-385-2423).

10. Finally, call the FMCSA's Safety Violation and Consumer Complaints hotline at 888-368-7238 (open 24/7) and ask about complaints against your moving company. And, if possible, go to the company's address and check out the facilities in person.

11. Now you can select a mover. You should feel confident about any company you've run through the checks above. Confirm the dates and details of your move, and make sure you get a signed order for service and a bill of lading.

12. On moving day, get a written copy of the mover's inventory list, provide the movers with specific directions for getting to your new home, and make sure you have a number where you can reach the movers throughout the move.

The above video begins with a woman in business attire walking slowly towards a blurred wall of flashing server equipment. It transitions to a camera slowly zooming out to a frontal view of two women and one man standing side by side in front of a dry erase board. The woman in the middle uses a white marker to circle the word "Plane" on the board. Then it transitions to a side view of a walkway with handrails and glass panes reveals the blurry image of ships in the background. A man in business attire carries his luggage down the walkway, then continues off frame. It transitions again to two men and one woman, all wearing business attire, sitting at a table engaged in a conversation. The man on the left nods in approval as the man on the right gestures in explanation. The last transition shows a timelapse of a sunset slightly obscured by low-flying clouds, creating a calm glow over an array of solar panels.

Page: Top 10 Piano movers in Houston area

10 Facts About Piano.....you can call it fun facts.

You may spend a lot of time picking out scales and pouring our hearts into the piano, but how much do you know about the instrument itself? The piano is an incredible musical instrument with a very interesting past, and these ten facts about the instrument you spend so much time with may have you thinking about it in a new way!

Fact 1: There are 7500 working parts in the body of each piano. That's an enormous number of little pieces that need to be working perfectly to get the sound that you need!

Fact 2: The piano is generally considered to be a member of the percussion family because it only makes noise when a hammer hits a string. Bet you didn't know that you could be considered a percussionist!

Fact 3: The name 'piano' is actually a nickname for the full Italian name of the instrument, which is 'pianoforte'. This longer name was given to the instrument based on its ability to play notes very quietly (piano) or very loudly (forte).

Fact 4: The piano is actually a relatively new instrument! The first piano constructed was made in 1698 by Bartolomeo Cristofori in Italy. That might sound old, but other instruments such as the flute have been around for thousands of years – the piano is only 316 years old!

Fact 5: There are 230 strings required for a piano to make its full range of sound. There is an incredible amount of pressure on these strings too – over 30 tons of pressure might be exerted on a concert grand!

Fact 6: The piano is known as the “King of the Instruments” because its range goes from the lowest note that you can play on a double-bassoon to the highest note that you can play on a piccolo. The single instrument covers a full orchestral range!

Fact 7: There are 18 million non-professional piano players in the United States alone, and over 10 million pianos! This is can be a huge benefit when it comes to studying music at a higher level – no matter which instrument is your principal area of study, most programs will ask you to have a year of piano lessons under your belt as well.

Fact 8: A concert grand piano is 8' 11" and weighs over 1400 pounds. This is why everyone looks so tiny when they are playing one! This size also helps the instrument to produce its incredible sound quality.

Fact 9: Even though piano keys are referred to as the “ivories”, they have not been made out of ivory since the 1940s to protect endangered resources. Now they are made out of plastic instead. Fact 10: The best piano brand in the world is considered to be the Steinway piano. The Steinway family has been making pianos since 1853 and a Steinway Grand Piano can cost well over $100, 000. Hopefully these fun facts have changed the way that you think about your piano – it isn't just a tool you use for practice, it is an intricate instrument that is capable of more than you may think!

What Movers won't move

PerishablesWith long-distance moving, food items will not be allowed by movers. This is because the food will not keep and could attract rats and other pests that might damage your property.If your move will be picked up and delivered within 24 hours, the moving company may allow perishables to be transported as long as they are properly packed.Perishable items include those listed below.

If you are having a moving company transport your belongings, it should provide you with a list of “non-allowables.” This is an industry term for items professional movers will not transport.This list not only includes no-brainers such as ammunition and gasoline, but also seemingly innocuous items like nail polish and kids’ chemistry sets. Although not hazardous, the moving company will also include perishable food and personal or sentimental items.

Hazardous material

Hazardous items are generally those considered explosive, flammable or corrosive. Here’s a list of common items that moving companies consider non-allowable: Hazardous items are generally those considered explosive, flammable or corrosive.

Personal or sentimental items Professional movers don't like to transport these items because of the inherent risk of loss or damage. Basically, movers want to limit their liability in case these items are lost or damaged. As a consumer, you likely want to have these items under your control anyway. The loss of medical records, financial documents or school records could be difficult to replace. Sensitive electronics, such as laptops, might be damaged by the extreme temperatures in a moving van. Jewelry, cash, collections and personal video tapes or CDs could not be replaced if lost.

Page: move protection and storage

Under federal law, all interstate movers must offer two different liability options: Full Value Protection and Released Value Protection. Most movers offer both options for local or intra-state moves, too.

Types of MovesLocal Move

Any move under 50 miles is generally considered a local move, while relocating beyond that distance in the same state is an intrastate move. A local move is commonly charged at an hourly rate and includes charges for additional services. Longer intrastate moves are generally priced on the weight of your shipment. (Always check with moving companies about how you will be charged.) A move out of state is an interstate move, also called a long-distance move.

If you hire a mover from outside your state coming to move you within 50 miles within your state is still under the local move definition and pricing.

Moving Interstate This is an entirely different matter. Costs will be dictated by how much stuff you're moving, how heavy it is, and the number of miles the shipment will be traveling to your new home. Cutting the costs for a long-distance move is simple: move less stuff (or less heavy stuff). If you have heavier items that you have not used for a long time, it may be better to dispose of them before moving. One other factor affecting your move: if you're moving from Kansas to New York, well, you're not in Kansas anymore – the New York end of the journey will cost more because of the difference in labor costs between the two states. Ask the moving companies how this affects the costs.

On-Demand Services, LLC has an exceptional and excellent track record of providing a damage-free move. In extenuating circumstances when a damage or an accident does occur, we have a swift and stress-free damage claim resolution to indemnify our clients. We employ high caliber, well trained and well compensated crew including our truck drivers to safely pack and deliver your boxes and furniture to you. Therefore, every successful and damage-free move is a result of our recruiting programs aimed at employing the best and disciplined worker.

Your homeowners' insurance policies may or may not provide coverage for your household goods for moving purposes. However, you should check with your own insurance agent to see if your existing homeowner/renters' policy covers your goods while in transit, while some policies may cover you be sure you have a written statement from your insurance company stating that your goods are covered while in transit. In some cases, you will find that your goods are covered against damages while the movers are in your home packing or unpacking, but not while the goods are in the movers' possession or transit. Get a clear written explanation of protection coverages.

DO NOT FALL VICTIM!! to rogue or scrupulous movers. Do not let any mover tell you are 100% covered. You won't know until you have a costly claim and you will be on your own.

On-Demand Services, LLC assumes ownership and responsibility for the value of goods we transport. However, there are various levels of liability exposures and you should be aware of the level of protection provided and the charges for the options available. You should know and must choose the level of protection prior to your move.

Make a selection prior to the start of any packing or moving services:

Option 1: Released Value On-Demand Moving Services has a maximum liability under State Law for loss or damage to your property of $0.60 per pound, per article up to a maximum of $2,500. There is no additional cost for this option. You may increase this liability for loss or damage by paying extra valuation charges. Example: A 10-pound table is damaged or lost. You would be entitled to: 10 (lbs.) x 0.60 (cents per lb.) = $6.00. You would be allowed a maximum of $6.00 for that particular chair.

Option 2: Full Value Protection

Full value protection is the more comprehensive plan. Under this plan, On-Demand Services, LLC is liable for the replacement value of any lost or damaged belongings in your shipment. There is $500 deductible for this option. If any of your personal property is lost, destroyed or damaged while in your mover's custody, your mover will, at its discretion, offer to:

Option 3: Actual Cash Value

This is the most common option. Under this option, On-Demand Services, LLC would pay for a similar item at today's cost minus depreciation (replacement cost minus depreciation). In general, most household furniture are depreciated over seven years.

Example: You purchased a couch for $1,500 last year and it got damaged beyond repair or lost. The first year depreciation is  $($1,500 \text{ divided by } 7 \text{ years}) = $214.28$ . Therefore, you will receive a reimbursement for $1,285.71 or  $($1,500 - $214.28)$ . This is known as a straight-line depreciation, a depreciation amount of $214.28 will be deducted for each year you have had the couch. You have to show an original receipt of purchase.

The Small Business Administration (SBA) 8(a) Sole Source vehicle enables government agencies to engage in direct buy contracts with 8(a) certified contractors. On-Demand Services, LLC's 8(a) certification is active and valid through November 2028.

BackgroundSection 8(a) of the Small Business Act as amended by Congress, created the 8(a) business development program. This program enables SBA to assist small disadvantaged firms to develop their businesses. In applying to the program, a firm is rigorously evaluated on its ownership, operations, financial health, and past performance. Once accepted, the firm is required to provide SBA a detailed business plan and annually show continued success as a viable strong business entity. Firms that are approved are certified by the SBA for a period of nine years. The SBA has signed Memorandums of Understanding (MOUs) with Federal Agencies allowing them to contract directly with certified 8(a) firms. Participants can receive sole source contract, up to a ceiling of $4.0 million for goods and services, and $6.5 million for manufacturing.

How Many Boxes Do You Need? Use our handy chart to calculate what you'll need. It's worth getting few extras, You're ready to make a move, but your stuff is staring you in the face, silently mocking you. Packing up all your belongings is a daunting task, but there are many ways to make packing easier. Call on us on 1-888-208-1989. We can pack for you and we have the experience.

We use boxes designed for moving.

SMALL BOXES: 1.5 cu. ft. 18" x 12" x 12" Small and sturdy, these boxes are great for books, DVDs, video game consoles, cleaning supplies, magazines, tools and nick-knacks.

MEDIUM BOXES: 3.0 cu. ft. 18" x 18" x 16" Ideal for books, photo albums and toys. Absolutely perfect for kitchenware and collectibles.

LARGE BOXES: 4.5 cu. ft. 18" x 18" x 24" These are the big and tall boxes, excellent for the lighter and awkward sized stuff like pillows, blankets, towels, larger dishes and even lamps.

WARDROBE BOXES: 24" x 21" x 46" This box can hold your clothes right on their hanger.

CONTRACTOR TRASH BAGS: 42 gallons 48" x 33"

Strong and thick looking black bags. Very ideal to pack pillows, comforters, and large stuffed animals and plastic toys. You can use to bag clothes too.

On-Demand Services, LLC packing tips for you. These seven easy tips will get you ready to pack.

1. Don't Procrastinate Don't procrastinate. This seems simple enough, but getting started can be difficult. A few weeks prior to your move, start packing several boxes a day. Begin with items that are least essential to your daily life. If you pace yourself, you will be more organized and the job won't be so overwhelming. Make packing easier by not waiting to get started.
2. Pack room-by-room Focus on one area of a room at a time and don't mix items from different rooms in one box. To prevent miniature knickknacks and small items from being lost or mistakenly thrown out with the packing paper, wrap them in brightly-colored tissue paper.
3. Packing Labels Label clearly. On the top and side of each box, write a general description of the contents and the room name. Use different colored markers for each room, which will provide additional clarity for you and your movers.
4. Use Packing Paper Stay clean. Regular newspaper may bleed ink onto your possessions. Use white packing paper to wrap all items.
5. Stick with Moving Boxes Use boxes designed for moving. Boxes obtained from grocery or liquor stores are not always clean and might not hold the weight of the items that you will be putting in them. In addition, varying box sizes can make loading more difficult.
6. Know what you can't pack Know what you can't pack. Some common household items can't be shipped because they are hazardous. Don't wind up on the wrong side of the law. Read our list of what you can't put on the moving truck.
7. Moving valuables Don't box up everything. You should personally transport heirlooms, important papers, legal documents (wills, passports. etc.), and valuables. Make packing easier by deciding what doesn't need to be packed.

"Working with Lanre (the owner) and On-Demand Services was seamless and made my move less stressful. He and his workers are very professional and polite. My move was from lower Delaware County to northern Chester County, and the rates couldn't have been more reasonable. They were on time, and worked with me.

As a single woman, I felt at ease with them. I would highly recommend their moving services".

Page: Piano Moving

Do you need a superb piano mover? You have come to the right place.

Moving a piano is no child play and is not fun. It is heavy, oddly shaped and extremely heavy. Attempting to move piano without a professional knowledge is very dangerous and you could end up with a costly damage if you are lucky without sustaining a terrible injury. I have heard our past customers pat themselves on the back telling unpleasant stories how they had moved or tried to move their piano in the past, but confessed to never attempting doing it again. If you think about moving your piano, Please STOP!! DO NOT TRY IT. The cost of moving a piano is worth less than the injury you could sustain and the property damages that may cause.

At On-Demand Services, LLC we have the well trained and knowledgeable piano movers. We can make your piano move seamless and stress-free like you would never have believed. We handle pianos of all types, be they uprights or grands, with care and an eye on safety.

It is recommended you do not hire a piano mover without a basic knowledge of how a piano works. At least we do, and we would like to share some basic knowledge and fun facts about your piano.

Choose us because we are..Trustworthy & Reliable

Choose us because we are honest and trustworthy. You are already thinking about how to select or choose a moving company that is trustworthy, and you cannot underestimate the benefits and peace of mind that come from hiring a reliable mover. Whether your move is local, long-distance, or commercial, your fundamental guide is to understand a company's reputation. How past clients are treated is an indicator of how you will be treated. To explore a company's reputation, you have to check the company's reviews, ratings, and comments online. We have references we can provide you with, or you can simply read our online reviews to see for yourself.

Choose us because of..Our Passion for the EnvironmentMoving creates a lot of waste, and when you think of moving, what comes to mind first is landfill waste. Boxes, boxes, and boxes. Keeping the earth clean is part of what we care about, so we take steps to be environmentally friendly. We are an environmentally friendly organization. There are steps we have implemented into our business and moving processes that we can apply to help you move with the smallest carbon footprint possible without incurring any additional costs. In fact, moving green can actually be less expensive for you.

Amazing service!

Happy customer!"Wow! These guys were amazing! My original movers cancelled last minute (8pm on moving night) on me but when I got in contact with Lanre he had a three man crew at my place at 10pm that night!! The guys worked fast and were very friendly and professional. I couldn't have been more pleased with the service. The most incredible thing was I had been searching everywhere that day for money that I could not find. The guys showed up to the unloading location with the money I had lost. It's hard to find such honest people! Thank you so much Lanre you are a hero!!!"

How we Move Green: 4 Simple Steps.

Our fleet of trucks is non-diesel operated with low and clean emissions that meet strict environmental standards. Trucks that use diesel fuel emit harmful toxins into our air and are responsible for the majority of cancer risks from outdoor air pollutants. Diesel particulate matter also contributes to more than 2,000 premature deaths, asthma attacks, and other respiratory problems each year. These problems are exacerbated when large, moving vehicles are left idling. Our trucks are equipped with only battery-operated lift gates or ramps. Moving trucks with battery-operated lift gates ensure that there is no need to leave the trucks idling at your curb while the move is taking place. You can tell we value your health.

Less Waste and Save Money

From boxes to bubble wrap, we only use 100 percent recyclable materials to keep our neighborhoods cleaner and greener. Save money by asking for boxes you can rent from us rather than buying your own boxes. If you have already bought boxes, we can buy your used boxes back from you after your move. Cha-ching! Money saved.

Reduce, Reuse and Recycle

We are eco-friendly movers, and we make every waste from your move a green disposal process by connecting you with charities that can really make use of all that furniture, old clothes, and books, food banks that can use those Costco-sized cans of tuna, and recyclers that will dispose of your unwanted items in an eco-friendly way. We have alliances with charities and domestic e-waste recyclers so your old computers, microwaves, etc. are not shipped off to unregulated third-world environmental disaster dumping grounds but instead are recycled in facilities that follow U.S. environmental regulations. Come on, you know your new place will thank you for it.

Partner With Us, Hire Us

We value relationships. Many companies think of moving as a one-time transaction. They don't care if they ever see you or your neighbors again. Yikes, how do you think they will treat you and your stuff? This is why On-Demand Services, LLC, is different. When you use a moving company that takes the extra steps to be more environmentally friendly, like we do, you are also gaining movers that go the extra mile in providing top-of-the-line client service. Chances are, if they care about the earth, they care about the people that inhabit it too. They care about lasting relationships. You don't have to think green all the time; you simply have to hire us for your move to be environmentally conscious and to play a role within our community. It's a great big green win-win!
